Kathleen,
Sorry for the delayed response, I was out all last week.
At this point, I can't confirm any dates. What I know is that the draft risk evaluations need to be published this summer so that they can undergo public comment and peer review, since the direction we have is that the final risk evaluations will be published in December.
Sorry I can't give you any more information regarding dates.
Ana

Ana

I recently heard from an industry colleague that EPA may be issuing the draft risk evaluation for the solvents on the first ten chemicals list by the end of May. Are you in a position to confirm or deny that statement?

I understand that any information that you share would be an estimate only, but any updates would be very helpful.
